Seafood - The snow crab leg markets remain historically expensive. The next major harvest season is in the Alaskan Bering Sea and will not officially get underway until next month. The quota this year, although expected to be much larger than 2017-18 and on par with 2018-19, is likely to be historically small. Further, the bulk of the landings won't come until after December. High snow crab leg prices are likely to persist this fall.
